

PSALM 132

Lord remember David, (Jesse's youngest son); and all his great afflictions, his troubles every one.

- 2 How he swore to You O Lord, with promise and a vow; to the Mighty One of Jacob, think upon it now.
- 3 "I will never enter, to the chamber of my home; nor go to lie upon my bed, nor rest there all alone.
- 4 I'll not give sleep unto my eyes, though drowsy I may be; or slumber to my eyelids, when fatigue has taken me.
- 5 Until I find a proper spot, where the Lord can stay; a residence for Jacob's God, the Mighty One we praise."
- 6 Behold we heard at Ephratah, yea there in Bethlehem; among the verdant forest fields, we found this promise then.
- 7 We will come into His temple, tabernacle true; and fall prostrate in worship there, at the Lord's footstool.
- 8 Rise up O Lord into Your rest, and find such sweet repose; You and the powerful ark of witness, fashioned all of gold.
- 9 Let Your priests be wrapped in justice, girded with Your right; let all those who follow You, shout gladly in Your sight.
- 10 For Your servant David's sake, (Messiah David's son); never turn Your face away, from Your anointed one.
- 11 The Lord vowed unto David, not to turn back from His oath; Messiah from David's line, would sit upon the throne.
- 12 If his sons will keep the compact, that He teaches them; then their sons will reign as they, till time that has no end.
- 13 For the Lord has chosen Zion, as His holy mount; the dwelling that He longed for, a habitation sound.
- 14 "This is My rest forever, and this is where I'll live; the place that I have longed to set, the blessing that I give.
- 15 I'll pour forth great provision, blessing I will bless; and fill the destitute with food, (and comfort all the rest).
- 16 I'll clothe her priests with My salvation, and My liberty; the godly there will shout for joy, and praise abundantly.
- 17 There I'll make the horn of David, as a Branch to sprout; My Messiah shining forth, ordained to carry out.
- 18 All his foes and adversaries, will be wrapped in shame; but on Messiah's head a crown, will sparkle and remain."
